SUPREME DECISION

CNN

After years of struggle on both sides of the issue, the question of same-sex marriage goes before the U.S. Supreme Court this week. People already were lining up outside the court Friday morning for the limited number of seats available Tuesday and Wednesday, when the justices will hear oral arguments on two cases.

Here's a look at what to expect.

As Joe Biden might say, it's a big family deal

These are no ordinary laws before the Supreme Court: They represent battles over a generations-old concept of marriage and the rights of an increasing number of families in legally recognized gay and lesbian relationships.

There are an estimated 120,000 legally married same-sex couples in the U.S. Nine states and the District of Columbia now allow same-sex couples to marry, and a dozen others recognize civil unions or domestic partnerships that grant some of the same benefits without full marriage rights.

But 29 states have added bans on same-sex marriage to their constitutions, including California, the most populous state.

How we got here

It starts back in 1993, when Hawaii's Supreme Court found that the state couldn't deny same-sex couples the right to marry without a "compelling reason" and sent the issue back to the state legislature. Hawaii lawmakers quickly passed a law banning gay marriage, and advocates of traditional marriage began mobilizing.

That led to the passage of the federal Defense of Marriage Act, the 1996 legislation that forbids the recognition of same-sex marriages nationwide and bars married gay and lesbian couples from receiving federal benefits.

But DOMA is becoming an orphan. Two federal appeals courts already have struck down its benefits provision, the Obama administration has refused to defend it and former President Bill Clinton, who signed it, now calls it "incompatible with our Constitution."

The California ban, known as Proposition 8, passed by a 52-48 percent margin in 2008. Opponents of the measure have succeeded in convincing federal judges at the district and appellate levels to find the ban unconstitutional.

The justices will hear oral arguments on Proposition 8 on Tuesday. On Wednesday, they will take up DOMA.

A civil right, or a political question

One the biggest issues facing the justices is whether they can—or should—issue a ruling that will effectively broaden the legal definition of marriage, long restricted to heterosexual couples. Backers of DOMA and Proposition 8 say it should be up to the public to make that decision, not the courts.

"We don't need the Supreme Court to take that right away from Americans of good faith on both sides of this issue and impose its judicial solution," said Austin Nimocks of the Alliance Defending Freedom, a Christian advocacy group.

But California Attorney General Kamala Harris, who is arguing against Proposition 8, said voter-approved marriage bans "are simply unconstitutional."

Who to watch

Same-sex marriage advocates will be watching Justice Anthony Kennedy during this week's arguments. The generally conservative Reagan appointee has authored two opinions that advanced gay rights during his tenure.

Conservative supporters of the bans have turned their eyes toward Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

CNN legal analyst Jeffrey Toobin said Ginsburg is likely to find DOMA unconstitutional but isn't likely to knock down bans on same-sex marriage nationwide.

A shifting landscape

The court is hearing arguments as a public shift toward same-sex marriage appears to be gathering speed. The proportion of Americans who support same-sex marriage has grown from around 40 percent in 2007 to 53 percent in a CNN/ORC International poll conducted last week; 44 percent remain opposed.

"Eventually, as time marches on, this is a country that believes pretty squarely in marriage equality," former Bush spokeswoman Nicolle Wallace told "Fox News Sunday."

Put this term in a danger zone

e @fritzfrack

In case you missed the momentous announcement, Oxford's online dictionary has an addition to its digital pages: "friend zone" became an approved word last month.

The "friend zone," or "a situation in which a platonic relationship exists between two people, one of whom has an undeclared romantic or sexual interest in the other," has become a more popular term in recent months thanks to the revolting Friend Zone Fiona meme as well as its real-life antithesis. Nice Guys of OkCupid.

But before we dive down that delicious rabbit hole of misogyny, let's look at the rather innocuous origins of the term "friend zone."

Remember the good of days of the mid-'90s? That's when Joey, from a little-known TV show called "Friends," told his buddy Ross that he had waited too long to ask out their mutual friend Rachel; Ross was in the "friend zone." Back during the relative innocence of the '90s, "friend zone" was just the poorly conceived notion that once you became friends with someone, there was no way to transition to lovers.

However in recent years, "friend zone" has made a roaring comeback. According to Google analytics, a paradigm shift happened around the end of 2011, when searches of the term went through the roof. But with the resurgence came a twist; the term was now being used more by supposed "nice guys" who couldn't seem to "score" with their attractive female friende

It was then that we met Friend Zone Fiona, a smiling blonde with hilariously sexist comments over her face such as "You can hit it ... out of the park as leader on this group project, I know it!" The message was that it was outrageous for a guy to spend so much time actually being NICE to a girl without getting something in return.

The very audible retort was the Nice Guys of OkCupid meme, which displayed the self-identified nice guy's profile, usually with some horrible sexist comments. Much of 2012 was then a flurry of back-and-forth argument. One of my personal favorites came from a blogger who sums up the entire debate perfectly: "'Slut' is how we vilify a woman for exercising her right to say 'yes.' 'Friend zone' is how we vilify a woman for exercising her right to say 'no.17

What is so disturbing about the idea of "friend zone" is that these self-indulgent navelgazers believe they deserve to be in "sexy zone" just because they were nice to a girl. It is the misogynistic paradigm that exists everywhere from memes to Steubenville, Ohio; some men believe that simply by being "nice guys," they are owed open access to any girl's body.

The term itself has always bugged me, but what is insane to me is that Oxford had to go and make it a "real" word, officially validating the erroneous theory for thousands of whiny (and often misogynist) men.

It's not that I'm against random jargon words entering the hollowed pixels of Oxford. I love that "appletini" is recognized as both a legitimate and delicious word. But dictionaries should stay out of legitimizing the sexist-sadsack rhetoric of the Internet. Besides, Ross and Rachel's epic love story officially proves "friend zones" don't exist.

PURGE BEFORE YOU SPLURGE—HOW TO SELL YOUR CLOTHES AFTER SPRING CLEANING

By Renee Mailhiot | FOR REDEVE

Blazers with missing buttons. Fraternity sweatshirts. Too-small jeans that might just fit again someday ... OK, probably never.

If this sounds like the inside of your closet, then it's time to embrace spring cleaning season.

The gold standard of closet purging is to ask yourself whether you've worn an item of clothing within the past year, but that's not the only way to determine what should stay and what should go. April Francis, a wardrobe stylist with The Haute Closet, recommends taking a look at fit and quality. "If it doesn't fit, get it altered or get rid of it," she said. If it's hanging on a by a thread—literally—now is the time to let it go.

The emotional attachment to clothes can be hard to break, but once it's broken, you'll be left with a pile of clothing to sell or donate. Here's how to figure out whether your cast-offs might net you some quick cash to refill the newly empty spaces in your drawers.

DESIGNER GOODS

Those Chanel sunglasses that overwhelm your face shape. That Burberry scarf from your long-gone ex-girlfriend. Make back some of the large sums of money you spent on high-end, luxury labels at consignment stores, which specialize in taking designer names off your hands to sell in-store or on eBay.

McShane's Exchange

815 W. Armitage Ave. 773-525-0282

Chloe bags, Chanel jackets and Jimmy Choo shoes are typical pieces that this shop will sell on consignment—meaning you get paid when your stuff sells. Items are sold at about a third of the original price and are consigned for a 60-day period, after which you'll have the chance to consign again. Most items should be less than two years old and reflect current trends.

You get: 50 percent of consignment price

eDrop-Off

2117 N. Halsted St.; 1155 N. State St. 773-525-7467

This eBay consignment service accepts all-season trends, from contemporary designer labels such as Tory Burch. Diane von Furstenburg and Rag & Bone up to high-end names such as Chanel and Louis Vuitton. For spring, designer sunglasses are in demand, while name-brand handbags are a good bet year-round.

You get: 60 percent of consignment price

Designer Resale of Chicago

658 N. Dearborn St. 312-587-3312

Top designers—think Prada, Marni and Alexander McQueen—are sold by this website, which also has a River North location.

You get: 60 percent of the consignment price: 50 percent for luxury labels such as Chanel, Hermes and Gucci; or cash up front for garments with high selling potential

The Haute Spot

935 W. Chestnut St. 312-226-7768

Designer labels, including menswear and some home goods, are included at this River West operation. Most of the items, like Louis Vuitton and Prada purses, are sold on eBay, but shopping by appointment is offered as well. Items from all seasons are accepted, but staffers do wait to sell items that are especially season-centric (i.e. white linen pants in the summer) to snag the best profit.

Typically, a garment qualifies as vintage if it's 20 years old or older; if your throwback pieces truly are from a past era, consider selling them on sites such as Etsy or eBay. Just because an item is old doesn't make it a desirable sell, so for extra input, head to these shops in person to try your hand at turning a profit.

Very Best Vintage

1919 W. Chicago Ave. 312-226-5530

This shop currently accepts mostly seasonal items primarily from the 1920s-70s, but not everything goes: An average polyester shirt from the '80s probably won't cut it, but party dresses—especially from the '50s and '60s—sell well. Fur and outerwear are priority items too, but spring and summer clothes are being accepted now.

You get: 50 percent of the consignment price

Knee Deep Vintage

1425 W. 18th St. 312-850-2510

While '50s- and '60s-era pieces a la Betty Draper are the preferred items at this Pilsen shop now, it accepts most attire from the 1990s and earlier. The owners specialize in wearable vintage, so anything resembling a costume isn't accepted. Men can sell their retro items here as well, especially early '90s T-shirts.

You get: 50 percent of the item's resale value in store credit or 30 percent in cash

Mr. and Mrs. Digz

5668 N. Clark St. 773-447-8527

Thirty-eight local designers bring their creations to this shop, but vintage accessories such as clip-on earrings, spring hats and clutches also are sold on consignment.

KEEP OR TOSS?

Fashion is cyclical, and styles have a tendency to repeat themselves. We asked local experts to sound off on what's worth holding on to—and what doesn't stand a chance of a comeback anytime soon.

KEEP

Denim Darkwash denim is a classic, but '90s and '00s styles have been popping on the runways, such as grunge styles at 3.1 Phillip

Lim and Dries Van Noten, said Army Creyer of the Chicago Street Style blog. "Destroyed jeans, like the Britney era, without a doubt (will be in style) because of the whole obsession now with the '90s." Azeeza Khan, designer of local women's line Atelier Azza, adds that "denim on denim, even overalls, are making a comeback in cooler ways." One exception: See wax-coated denim under "toss" below.

Peplums This hot 2012 silhouette still is holding court in stores and fashion magazine's spring issues. Ladies, your peplum tops or dresses could have another season of wear left in them; however, Creyer warned that anytime a trend becomes mass-marketed quickly, it also can fade quickly.

Leather Last fall's biggest trend also was spotted in spring 2013 runway shows, so consider your leather pieces an investment that will stand the test of time.

Classics Crisp buttondowns, blazers and statement jewelry will always have a special place in a closet, said Mallory Ulaszek, owner of Old Town boutique Cityblue, "Anything classic is never going out of style."

Varsity jacket This high school sports staple has been spotted on everyone from fashion editors to celebs such as Rihanna and Taylor Swift.

TRENDY THREADS

Looking to ditch clothing that's in good condition and still on-trend? Consider taking it to these buy-sell-trade boutlques.

Crossroads Trading Co.

2717 N. Clark St. 773-296-1000; 1519 Milwaukee Ave. 773-227-5300

Guys, this is the place to sell your dark skinny denim and plaid shirts. Ladies, drop off the peplum dress that never fit you properly along with other fastfashion fads. Current trends such as pastels, colored denim and neon accessories are sought-after here.

You get: Half of the item's resale value in store credit or 35 percent in cash

Buffalo Exchange

1478 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-227-9558

This shop will give you cash up front for trends seen in stores now, like H&M attire, and also offers consignment for more unique items. No appointments are necessary and staffers will look at anything you're willing to toss.

You get: 35 percent of the item's resale value in cash or 50 percent in store credit

Plato's Closet

2817 N. Broadway 773-549-2070

This resale chain uses a computer formula to determine how much it will buy of a particular kind of garment. Condition, brand and demand all factor into the final retail value.

Men's skinny dark-wash denim and bright graphic prints for summer are in demand, and Forever 21 and Urban Outfitters are its top brands.

You get: 30-40 percent of the item's resale value in cash

Elliott Consignment

2465 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-404-6080: 3015 N. Broadway 773-549-4330

Higher-end men's and women's labels starting with J. Crew and Banana Republic are accepted at this shop.

You get: 50 percent of the consignment price

Savvy Seconds and 1st's

4724 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-728-8920

This is the place to sell spring hats of all shapes, sizes and colors, in addition to maxi dresses and floral threads from labels such as Free People, Anthropologie and American Apparel. For men, the shop looks for button-downs and T-shirts, and they also are looking to expand their vintage selection.

You get: 50 percent of the garment's sale price in store credit (good for one year) or 40 percent of the consignment value in cash. You also can trade on the spot for something of comparable value.

TOSS

Neon Highlighter-bright accessories were everywhere last year, but again, quick saturation can lead to a dying trend. "Neon in general is fading away and being replaced with muted tones, "said Creyer.

Monogrammed

bags Khan recalls collecting letter-printed purses in her college days. Unless it's a timeless classic such as a monogrammed canvas L.L. Bean tote, it can go.

Wax-coated denim

This style was all over stores

last fall. "It does have that faux-leather look, but ... it has no staying power in your closet," Ulaszek said.

High-low hems Arfectionately nicknamed "the mullet," short-in-the-front, long-in-the-back skirts and dresses blew up big last year and are nearly played out.

Chicagoans put a new spin on online shopping

By Renee Mailhiot | FOR REDEYE

Getting the nerve to rid your closet of unwanted clothing, accessories and shoes is one hurdle; deciding what to do with the excess trimmings is another. Enter The Social Closet, a new online service founded on the premise of finding treasures in your friends' trash.

Marine Soussan-Gouachon and Fanny Chereau moved to Chicago from France five and two years ago, respectively, and became friends through the city's French community. As they would raid each other's closets to hit the town, they would stumble upon covetable garments that the other no longer had use for.

"We would mix and match with other stuff just lying in the closet that you don't wear anymore," Soussan-Gouachon said.

So the pair put their heads together and decided to launch The Social Closet. With Soussan-Gouachon's degree from the French Fashion Institute and Chereau's management and consulting background, they tackled the idea, which was inspired by similar European

"We wanted an online marketplace where people could interact," Soussan-Gouachon said. "[The European websites] are really successful and have hundreds and thousands of members—it's crazy. We're ex-pats, so why not take something from home and adapt it to a U.S. market?"

The service is geared toward Chicago-based sellers and buyers for efficient local access.

"We're trying to build a community," Soussan-Gouachon said. "We started with friends, then friends of friends, and we realized we could extend it so everyone could enjoy."

Currently, sellers can create profiles and build their online "closets" with photos and prices for items they'd like to sell.

The site focuses on contemporary, designer and luxury labels for men, women and children. Translation: That classic two-year-old J. Crew dress that's been collecting dust, that Zara top from last season or a monogrammed designer handbag all work, but those Old Navy jeans that no longer fit won't make the cut. Garments also must be in good condition and have a reasonable potential to sell.

Once an item is sold, The Social Closet takes 15 percent commission of the selling price and provides a pre-paid mailing label for the seller to ship the garment to the buyer. Buyers can choose to utilize a premium service that costs an additional 10 percent of the purchase price; it features The Social Closet as more of a middleman: Garments route through them first to ensure authenticity and quality. Buying won't launch until May, but sellers can begin building their free profiles now on thesocial closet.com.

Mom: 'It's still going on'

West Side man dies two decades after being shot. paralyzed as a teenager

Chicago Tribune

The July 1993 article started the way too many still do. Three people, including two teenagers, had been shot over the weekend, the reporter wrote. Police hadn't arrested anybody. One of the victims, a teen named Keith Cunningham, was in critical condition. Officers said he might not have been the intended target.

Cunningham, 16, was relaxing on a porch on the West Side as Saturday, July 24, faded into Sunday, July 25. About 12:45 a.m., two gunmen approached on foot and fired several rounds, police said at the time. Bullets landed in the high school student's neck and back. Back home, his mother answered the phone and heard the news.

Like most of the young men struck by gunftre each year in Chicago, Cunningham's name quickly faded from the headlines. But his story didn't end.

After living almost 20 years as a gunshot victim, Cunningham died Friday The immediate cause of death was sepsis, a complication of the quadriplegia he developed from the shooting. The Cook County medical examiner's office classified the 36-year-old's death as a homicide.

The "homicide" label doesn't mean much to Maxine Cunningham, who for years after the shooting cared for her son in her North Austin home. Keith Cunningham spent a year in rehab, moved back home, graduated from high school, became a man and became an uncle. He still doted on his niece, kissed his mother good night and followed his beloved

Cunningham didn't talk about the night that left him paralyzed, his mom said, but he'd always shake his head when he heard about another shooting. Two decades later, the evening news is still full of stabbings and killings and shootings.

Maxine Cunningham said that's painful. "It's still going on," she said. "When they shoot somebody and get away with it, it don't make no sense."

This is very difficult and there's a lot of anguish—I understand that and I appreciate it."

'He had a bad, bad streak'

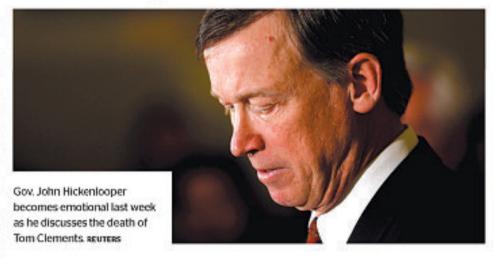

Colorado Gov. John Hickenlooper, a longtime family friend of a prime suspect in the shooting death of the state's prisons chief, said Sunday that the now-dead suspect always seemed to suffer from a "streak of cruelty and anger."

Hickenlooper said he and Jack Ebel, the father of white supremacist ex-convict Evan Ebel, had been friends for more than 30 years and that he had spoken to Evan Ebel since the 28-year-old Denver parolee emerged as a lead suspect in the shooting Tuesday of Tom Clements, executive director of the Colorado Department of Corrections.

"From the beginning, his son just seemed to have this bad streak, a streak of cruelty and anger," Hickenlooper told CNN's "State of the Union." "They did everything they could. They worked with Evan again and again but to no avail. He had a bad, bad streak."

Evan Ebel was killed by police Thursday after a high-speed chase through Decatur, Texas.

He also is a suspect in the killing of pizza delivery man Nathan Leon in Denver, police there have said.

Hickenlooper said an investigation is continuing and that "all the signs" in the Clements killing seemed to point to Ebel, whom he confirmed had been connected to a prisonbased white supremacist group.

The governor did not rule out the possibility that the Clements killing had been ordered by jailed white supremacist gang leaders targeting public officials from behind bars.

Jeff Kramer, a spokesman for the sheriff's office in El Paso County, Colo., said Sunday that Evan Ebel definitely was considered a suspect in the death of Clements, 58, who was shot Tuesday when he answered the door at his home about 45 miles south of Denver.

WHICH BIG TEN TEAMS ARE THROWING THEIR WEIGHT AROUND?

RedEye

The Big Ten was the big man on campus entering this NCAA tournament, with seven teams in the Big Dance. Four are left standing after the first weekend. Who came up big in the clutch? We rate the Big Ten teams' performances on our Madness Meter.

ILLINOIS

You get your money's worth with the Illini. For every scoring drought they put you through, they give you a stretch where they look like the Miami Heat. That said, Illinois couldn't get hot long enough to upend the Miami Hurricanes on Sunday. At least the Big Ten should be a cakewalk next season. Oh, wait ...

OHIO STATE

Buckeyes fans might still be holding their breath. Their team's first game was easy, a 25-point win over Iona. The second? Not so much. Second-seeded Ohio State needed a 3-pointer from Aaron Craft with less than a second left to knock off 10th-seeded Iowa State on Sunday. This after the Buckeyes benefited from a controversial offensive foul call on the Cyclones moments earlier. Whew!

MICHIGAN

There wasn't much suspense in the Wolverines' two wins in the tournament so far. But they brought their dunking shoes with them. Between Michigan and Florida Gulf Coast, it's a tossup (alley-oop?) as to who wins the title of Lob City, NCAA.

THE STARTING LINE » Blackhawks vs. Los Angeles, 7 p.m. CSN » Bears sign linebacker James Anderson to one-year contract

The 11th-seeded Golden Gophers were good for one upset, beating sixth-seeded UCLA on Friday. They couldn't solve Florida on Sunday though, bowing out by 14 points. They still have hockey season though!

MINNESOTA

WISCONSIN ----The Badgers are the tortoise of college hoops. The slower they play, the better they feel. But their strategy backlired Friday when they were outscored 35-21 in the second half and lost to Mississippi. Gonna be a long spring-which is really just a milder winter-up in Madison. Illinois goes bust

Chicago Tribune

At the start of the season, Illinois coach John Groce presented players with a wristband that read "3-19-13."

The start of the NCAA tournament.

The Illini's R.I.P. date arrived on 3-24-13 with a 62-59 loss to a sound No. 2-seeded Miami squad with all the makings of a championship team.

That the Illini were still kicking this late in the season will be considered a success.

The Illini started the Big Ten season 2-7 and prompted a collective eye roll from the state. They got good at dusting themselves off, winning six of nine to end the regular season and live to tell about a tournament win.

The Illini still have not been to a Sweet t6 since Dee Brown and Deron Williams led them there in 2005.

But that is the step Groce has his eye on

The loss saw the end Illinois careers for Brandon Paul, D.J. Richardson, Tyler Griffey and Sam McLaurin.

They had knocked off heavyweights before this season, winning at Gonzaga and against No. 1 ranked Indiana. But this time, Miami was too overwhelming.

The Hurricanes will meet No. 3 seed Marquette in the East Region in Washington, D.C., making their first Sweet 16 appearance

The Illini survived their first test, which was to hang tight with Miami, withstand their size advantage and not allow the Hurricanes a quick insurmountable lead.

After a 1-for-8 start, Illinois caught fire as Griffey hit his first three 3-point attempts to help build a 16-12 lead as a heavy contingent of Illini fans at the Erwin Center roared. Paul hit a coast-to-coast layup at the buzzer to trail only 29-26 at halftime.

The Hurricanes started the second half o-for-7 and Illinois took a 35-34 lead with 12:23 left after another 3-pointer by Griffey and a dunk by Tracy Abrams.

N.Y. Mets 3, Washington 1

Third Mets game of the week, this time at their home field in Port St. Lucie. The park has a nice exterior with deep blue touches. The narrow concourse felt tight because the food lines were long. Standard New York fareincluding Nathan's hot dogs and potato knishes—are on the menu. Some of the park is shaded, but our seats were in the sun and it was 89 degrees on Saturday afternoon. Not that I'm complaining. Now that I've met the sun this year, it's going to be difficult to go back to Chicago.

From good to bad to worse

After being shut out in their first three matches, the Fire scored their first goal of the 2013 season Sunday. Patrick Nyarko's tally made it 1-1 against Chivas USA at the time, but Chivas eventually won 4-1, dropping the Fire to 0-3-1.

THE DIGIT

Can anyone stop the Miami Heat? No, that's not a rhetorical question. LeBron James and Co. extended their winning streak to 26 games Sunday, and it might be at 27 when they face the Bulls at the United Center on Wednesday.

Natalie Zea's not-so-funny week

Curt

Wagner

Natalie Zea says she prefers comedies. but her characters in two high-profile dramas find themselves in peril this week.

"Oh, God, I know. I gotta get away from this," she said Friday with a chuckle. "I've got to go do some sort of slapstick comedy?

The laughs will have to wait, at least on screen. On Fox's "The Following," she plays Claire Matthews, the former wife of serial killer and cult creator loe Carroll (James Purefoy) and former lover of the man who put him away, FBI agent Ryan Hardy (Kevin Bacon). Last week Joe started killing off women sharing Claire's name in the hopes of guilting her into joining him and their son, whom he has kidnapped. Joe's plan may just pay off in the appropriately titled "Guilt," airing at 8 p.m. Monday.

At 9 p.m. Tuesday, Zea reprises her role as Winona Hawkins, ex-wife of Deputy U.S. Marshal Raylan Givens on FX's "Justified." Winona hasn't been seen much this season, but in the episode, titled "Peace of Mind," we learn more about her and Raylan's unborn child. And if you watch Zea's final scene in the episode carefully, you may notice something else.

"Things get hairy," the actress teased. And that's all we'll say about that.

Here are a few excerpts from my chat with her last week and earlier in the season.

On whether Claire fears for her life with Joe:

*She has an advantage over everyone else because he's kind of played his cards in terms of him wanting no harm to come to her. ... Now, he has surrounded himself with ca-razy people, so obviously there's no guarantee that any number of those [acolytes] will go off and do their deals. But ... she knows that [Joe] the puppet master is pretty safe."

On what happens with Claire and Ryan:

"There is a really nice moment between Claire and Ryan where they sort of get things out in the open a little bit. There's so much pressure and tension building between the two of them; there's so much that's not been said. They take the most inopportune time to very quickly and very quietly get to the bottom of stuff."

On comedy vs. drama:

"I prefer doing comedies. I feel like drama is my day job and comedy is what I do to fulfill my creative urges because I tend to make more interesting choices in comedy. I tend to take more chances in comedy, and I tend to focus way more on detail."

On the indie comedy she wrote, "An Imaginary Place of East," which she hopes to begin filming this spring:

"It's been 10 years in the making. It went from 'this is going to be so fulfilling and so exciting. It's going to be a dream come true' to 'I want to get the [bleep] made.' "

DO YOU SNORE? ARE YOU OFTEN TIRED?

If you have sleep apnea, you may qualify to participate in a clinical research study investigating a new drug treatment for sleep apnea.

Obstructive sleep apnea is associated with increased risk for cardiovascular disease, diabetes, daytime sleepiness and motor vehicle accidents. Treatment of sleep apnea is currently limited to surgery or medical device. A clinical trial is underway at the University of Illinois at Chicago and Northwestern University evaluating an investigational drug therapy for the treatment of sleep apnea.

If you are between the ages of 21 and 64, and have obstructive sleep apnea, you may be eligible to participate in this study. Eligible study participants may receive study-related medical examinations and medication at no cost. Study participants will also be compensated for their time and travel.

To learn more about this research study or to find out if you qualify for screening, please call 1-312-413-7273.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD I READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM 🖠

Taurus April 20-May 20 As a stubborn Earth sign, you make the same mistakes over and over again. You have a long list of requirements that your lover must fulfill, but nobody is that perfect. Your honey has flaws, but you're a hot mess, too.

Gemini May 21-June 21 There's a right way to do things and a wrong way. The moon is showing you that it's stupid to assume your lover wants an open relationship like you do. So don't show up with a new friend and propose a threesome.

Cancer June 22-July 22 Mercury is inspiring you to share fantasies with your partner. Maybe you want to make love in a public place and risk getting caught. Go for it.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22 You'll want to show your partner off as the sun brings out your exhibitionist side. You'll enjoy hitting a club and making it clear that your lover belongs to you and nobody else. Lions like you love to mark territory.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22 Avoid arguing over stupid stuff. Mercury opposite your sign is making you more peevish than usual. You're annoyed that your girlfriend forgot to text you last night. Get some perspective.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 The moon is reminding you that you're way too sexy for just about everybody. Your ego is being enhanced and despite what you might think, it isn't pretty. Don't toss somebody aside because you think they're too uncool for you.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21 A friendly moon is putting you in a social mood. Host a cocktail party. Do something that allows you to show off your glamour and intelligence. Expect some fun flirtation along the way.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21 You won't be able to hold back as the sun brings pent-up emotions to the surface. If you've been nursing a crush, you'll want to talk about it. If you've been dying to get back together with someone, you'll confess the truth.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19 A relationship is improving, but you'll have to take it step by step. The moon is urging you to do your homework. Don't bury yourself in work like you usually do. Your honey needs you.

Aquarius Jan 20-Feb. 18 An intense full moon is bringing insight, You realize that telling your ex you want to remain friends wasn't such a good idea. This is a great week to Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 You'll take things the wrong way. even if nobody means you any harm. Your lover will tell you that you look good and you'll wonder how many times you looked bad.

Grumpy old man?

'42' star Harrison Ford's temperament isn't improving with age

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez If getting reamed by the notoriously grumpy Harrison Ford is a rite of passage for entertainment reporters, you could say I finally was initiated into the club March 18. In fact, you could say a few Chicago reporters were initiated that night. The actor and Maine East alum was testy with multiple media outlets on the red carpet at Chicago Cut Steakhouse during his appearance on behalf of Michigan Avenue magazine and the environmental group Conservation International, Afterward, reporters traded their tales of Ford.

My story? I asked Ford why he said in the March issue of Michigan Avenue that his role as Brooklyn Dodgers general manager Branch Rickey in the upcoming Jackie Robinson biopic, "42," was "a character different than any I'd played before," After all, his career spans

I never played a fat man with a high hairline and a cigar."

-Harrison Ford responding to playing the role of Brooklyn Dodgers manager Branch Rickey in the upcoming biopic "42"

40-plus years.

"Yeah, but I never played a fat man with a high hairline and a cigar," responded Ford, annoyed. "It's a very different character than any I've played before."

Not satisfied with his explanation, I asked if the personality of the character also made it unique among his many roles. Ford looked me in the eyes as if I'd just asked, "Who is Jackie Robinson[™] before finally breaking the silence: "Pardon me?"

I repeated my question, only this time there was no awkward silence.

"I think the reason I was able to understand the character and have an affinity for him is because his personality is not beyond my understanding," Ford said. "But I'd rather have the film describe his personality than me sit here and tell you what he's like."

I should note that there's a part of me that respects celebrities who refuse to kiss up to the media and play "the game." But it's hard for me to respect the stars who go out of their way to make your job difficult and let you know how much smarter they are, as Ford is known to do.

Considering five of his last eight films made less than $40 million each at the domestic box office, you would think the 70-year-old Ford would've tweaked his approach by now.

And you'd be wrong.

It's very possible "42" will have better luck with critics and audiences, judging only by the trailer and the historic nature of Robinson's story. It also helps that Americans seems to have a soft spot for baseball films. Why does Ford think Americans are drawn to base ...?

"I don't like baseball movies," Ford said before I could finish. "I like movies about moral courage and people who are indomitable and courageous and right." "42" hits theaters April 12.
